Blockchain finance is reshaping the traditional financial ecosystem. Through blockchain technology, financial services can achieve decentralization and disintermediation, reduce transaction costs, and improve efficiency. Currently, the main applications of blockchain finance include cross-border payments, digital currencies, decentralized exchanges (DEXs), lending platforms, etc. Compared with traditional finance, blockchain finance has higher transparency and lower entry barriers, providing new possibilities for the development of inclusive finance. However, the development of blockchain finance also faces challenges such as regulatory uncertainty and technical risks, requiring a balance between innovation and regulation.

The stimulus measures include subsidies for electricity and gas charges, as well as regional grants to ease price pressure and encourage small to medium-sized businesses to raise wages.

Catalyst windows can also distort price action. Listings and token unlocks may temporarily overwhelm shallow market depth, especially in illiquid altcoins. This can produce sharp “breaks” that often reverse once order flow normalizes. Research on market microstructure around launches and unlocks shows how depth, fragmentation and positioning can combine to create these head fakes.

The National Bureau of Economic Research (NBER) tracks four main indicators to identify recessions: employment, personal income, industrial production and retail sales.
