That state of affairs could now change imminently. Waller's plan would allow U.S. institutions focused on "payments innovation"—aka, crypto and other emerging financial technologies—to gain their own access to the Fed's services, as opposed to depending on third-party, master account-holding banks.

"Large banks have shown they'll restrict access for political reasons, targeting industries & individuals they disagree with, including gun manufacturers, digital assets, churches, & even @POTUS," Lummis tweeted while sharing the letter.

The alleged mastermind behind a $14 billion crypto scam, currently on the run from the U.S. government, has begun moving billions of dollars worth of Bitcoin to new wallets, according to on-chain data.

“The $9 million transfer that Arkham and others have cited was simply a transfer to another wallet under his control. He did not send those funds to an exchange (yet),” he said. But he cautioned that it’s possible that World Liberty has access to non-public information that explains the blacklisting.
