In a major show of force for Stripe's upstart blockchain project Tempo, the company has reportedly raised $500 million—and nabbed one of the Ethereum network's most prominent core developers, as well.

While the funding round marks a significant early win for Tempo—a layer-1 blockchain that will support payment processor Stripe's aggressive push into crypto—it was not the biggest news about the project that rocked Crypto Twitter on Friday.

Challenger Troy Johnson took a more nuanced stance, acknowledging concerns while remaining open to future consideration.

The Average Directional Index, or ADX, sits at 33, well above the critical 25 threshold that confirms a strong trending market. Think of ADX as your “trend strength meter”—it doesn’t care about direction, just whether a real trend exists. Below 20, you’re in choppy waters where false breakouts are common. Above 25, you’ve got momentum. At 33, BNB is firmly in trending territory, meaning institutions and retail are moving in the same direction, creating sustained buying pressure that can carry prices significantly higher.

Meanwhile, a new variant of XCSSET has emerged that can take screenshots, record what a user is doing, and steal data from their Telegram account.
