Players take turns playing cards that match the top card on the discard pile by color, number, or symbol. The first player to have no cards remaining wins the round. To get started with UNO, youll need at least two players and a standard UNO deck. Find a comfortable place to sit around, ensuring everyone can reach the draw and discard piles. Game Components: A standard UNO deck consists of numbered cards of different colors (red, yellow, green, and blue), along with several types of Action Cards and Wild Cards. First, choose one player to act as the dealer. This can be done by having each player draw a card, with the highest number becoming the dealer (Action Cards count as zero in this case, according to UNO Power Grab rules). The dealer then shuffles the entire UNO deck. Each player is dealt seven cards face down. The remaining cards are placed face down in the center to form the draw pile. it face up next to the draw pile to start the discard pile. If this first card is an Action Card or a Wild Card, some rules suggest flipping over additional cards until a number card appears. --> The Draw Two card in UNO features a +2 symbol. These cards come in each of the four colors: blue, green, red, and yellow. During your turn, you must play one card from your hand that matches the top card on the discard pile, either by color or by symbol (in this case, the +2 symbol of the Draw Two card, or if it is another Draw Two card of any color. 2. When you play a Draw Two card, the next player in turn must draw two cards from the draw pile. 3. After drawing the two cards, the next player also loses their turn. 4. Play then continues to the player after the one who had to draw. Its important to note that according to official UNO rules, you cannot stack. Draw Two cards from the draw player also loses their turn. 4. Play then continues to the player also loses their turn. 4. Play then continues to the player also loses their turn. draw two cards and skip their turn, even if they also have a Draw Two card. Some unofficial house rules might allow stacking, where a player draw four, and so on. However, these are not part of the standard game rules. If a Draw Two card is the very first card flipped to start the discard pile, the first player whose turn it is must draw two cards There is an optional scoring method in UNO. At the end of a round, the player who went out (played all their cards) receives points based on the cards left in their opponents hands. In this scoring system, each Draw Two card remaining in an opponents hand is worth 20 points. Number cards are worth their face value, and other action and wild cards have different point values. The first player to reach a total of 500 points wins the game. Alternatively, some play with a variation where the player to draw two cards from the draw pile and skip their turn. After playing a Draw Two card, you can select the color of the card that continues to play. For example, if the top card of the discard pile is a red 6, you can blay a wild Draw Two card and specify the color as yellow. Then, the next player has to draw two cards and miss their turn, and the following player has to play a yellow card or another wild card. In a variation of the game, if a player lays down a Draw 2 card, the next player will draw six cards. According to the official UNO Twitter account, stacking is against the rules to stack draw 2 cards. However, stacking forces a player to play a Draw Two or Draw Four if the player has it in their hand in a stacking situation. Subscribe to get the latest posts sent to your email.
