Start WingfinderPerson in a company or organization responsibility for making decisions for the company or organization. A chief financial officer (CFO) is an officer of a company or organization who is assigned the primary responsibility for making decisions for the company or organization. for projects and its financial planning, management of financial reporting, and financial reports to the chief executive officer (CEO) and the board of directors and may additionally have a seat on the board. The CFO directly assists the chief operating officer.[1] In the majority of countries, finance directors (FD) typically report into the CFO, and FD is the level before reaching CFO. The appointment of a CFO or FD may be mandated by law. For example, in India, per the provisions of Section 203 of Companies Act 2013 every publicly listed firm having a paid up share capital of Rs. 10 Crores, requires a full time CFO. In the government sector this may be specified also: The US Chief Financial Officers Act, enacted in 1990, created a CFO in each of 23 federal agencies. (See also Office of Management.) The chief financial officer was traditionally viewed as a financial "gatekeeper". Over time, the position has become one of an advisor and strategic partner to the CEO.[2][3] According to one source, "The CFO of tomorrow should be a big-picture thinker, rather than neserved, prefer to delegate rather than be hands-on, emphasize what gets done rather than how things are done, and make collaborative rather than unilateral decisions".[4] The duties of a modern CFO, therefore, now straddle the traditional areas of financial stewardship, as well as the more progressive areas of strategic- and business leadership, with increasingly direct responsibility and oversight of operations.[5] This significant role-based transformation is best-evidenced by the "CEO-in-Waiting" status that many CFOs now hold. Here, CEOs increasingly expect their CFOs to be active participants in shaping the strategy of their organizations, including challenging the strategy of the strategy managing financial volatilities is a centerpiece for many companies' strategic CFO, and many companies have created a chief strategic CFO, and many companies have created a chief strategic CFO, and many companies have created a chief strategic CFO, and many companies have created a chief strategic CFO, and many companies have created a chief strategic financial management. The CFO is then as much a part of governance and oversight as the CEO, playing a fundamental role in the development and critique of strategic choices. Relatedly The CFO is expected to be a key player in stockholder education[10] and communication, supports the CEO directly and provides timely advice to the board of directors."[11]The rise of digital technologies and focus on data analytics to support decision-making, places more pressure on CFOs to meet the expectations of their C-Suite colleagues.[12] Here, many organization responsible for driving financial planning processes as well as increased insight into financial and non financial KPIs to boost business partnering organization based on leadership of divisions, regions and performance and performance improvement expertise centers specializing in Tax, Treasury, Internal Audit, Investor Relations, etc.CFOs are increasingly being relied upon as the owners of business information, reporting and financial data within organizations - thereby also assisting in decision support operate more effectively and efficiently. The CFO must then serve as the financial authority in the organization, [13] ensuring the integrity of data, and modeling transparency and accountability. CFOs have then become more focused on financial reporting, although (as of 2016) a majority still spend much of their time in traditionally, many CFOs have made the realization that an operating environment that values cash, profit margins, and risk mitigation is one that plays to the primary skills and capabilities of a procurement organization; CFO's have been encouraged to appoint a chief procurement organization; CFO's have been encouraged to appoint a chief procurement organization) with the procurement function according to several research reports which have looked at the CFO's relationship with the procurement, dismissal, or new opportunitiescan significantly affect a companys direction and stability, especially given the CFOs growing role as a strategic partner to the CEO.[18]See also: Financial analyst Qualification, and Outline of finance EducationCFOs and FDs often hold a professional accounting qualification - the CPA, CA, CMA, or CIMA - along with its requisite bachelors and/or masters in accounting. The certification is specified given that responsibilities extend to tax and financial reporting.[19] Similarly, financial managers are often qualifications,[20] such as a Master of Business Administration,[21] or Master of Science in Finance;[22] the Chartered Financial Analyst is also common.[20] These complement the accounting perspective with more general strategic, leadership and financial market considerations, and give exposure to broader financial manager^ "Job openings/CFOO - Wikimedia Foundation". wikimediafoundation.org. Highest-ranking officer of an organizationIt has been suggested that Executive director be merged into this article. (Discuss) Proposed since May 2025."Chief executive and "CEO" redirect here. For other uses, see Chief executive (disambiguation) and CEO (disambiguation). A group of Fortune 500 CEOs in 2015A chief executive or managing director, is the top-ranking corporate officer charged with the management of an organization, usually a company or a nonprofit organization. CEOs find roles in various organizations, including public and private corporations, nonprofit organizations, and even some government organizations (notably state-owned enterprises). The governor and CEO of a corporation or company typically reports to the board of directors and is charged with maximizing the value of the business,[1] which may include maximizing the profitability, market share, revenue, or another financial metric. In the nonprofit and government sector, CEOs typically aim at achieving outcomes related to the organization's mission, usually provided by legislation. CEOs are also frequently assigned the role of the main manager of the organization and the highest-ranking officer in the C-suite.[2]The term "chief executive officer" is attested as early as 1782, when an ordinance of the Confederation of English Dictionary published online in 2011, the Dictionary says that the use of "CEO" as an acronym for a chief executive officer originated in Australia, with the first attestation being in 1914. The first American usage cited is from 1972.[4]The responsibilities of an organization's CEO are set by the organization's board of directors or other authority. depending on the organization's structure. They can be far-reaching or quite limited, and are typically enshrined in a formal delegation of authority regarding business strategy and other key policy issues, as well as leader, manager, and executor roles. The communicator role can involve speaking to the press and the public, as well as to the organization's management and employees. The decision-making role entails making high-level decisions regarding policy and strategy. The CEO is responsible for implementing the goals, targets, and strategic objectives as determined by the board of directors. As an executive officer of the company, the CEO reports the status of the business to the board of directors, motivates employees, and drives change within the organization's day-to-day operations.[5][6][7] The CEO is the person who is ultimately accountable for a company's business decisions, including those in operations, marketing, business development, finance, human resources, etc. The CEO of a political party is often entrusted with fundraising, particularly for election campaigns. The use of the CEO title may be used by for-profit companies or non-profit or charitable organisations, such as the Wikimedia Foundation. In some countries, there is a dual board system with two separate boards, one executive board for the day-to-day business and one supervisory board for control purposes (selected by the shareholders). In these countries, the CEO presides over the executive board and the chairperson presides over the supervisory board for control purposes (selected by the shareholders). held by different people. This ensures a distinction between management by the executive board and governance by the supervisory board. This allows for clear lines of authority. The aim is to prevent a conflict of interest and too much power being concentrated in the hands of one person. In the United States, the board of directors (elected by the shareholders) is often equivalent to the supervisory board, while the executive committee (the division/subsidiary heads and C-level officers that report directly to the CEO). In the United States, and in business, the executive officers are usually the top officers of a corporation, the chief executive officers of a corporation. (CEO) being the best-known type. The definition varies; for instance, the California Corporate Disclosure Act defines "executive officers" as the five most highly compensated officers not also sitting on the board of directors. In the case of a sole proprietorship, an executive officers as the five most highly compensated officers as the five most highly compensated officers. is a managing partner, senior partner, or administrative partner. In the case of a limited liability company, an executive officer is any member, manager, or officer. Main article: Corporate titleDepending on the organization, a CEO may have several subordinate executives to help run the day-to-day administration of the company, each of whom has specific functional responsibilities referred to as senior executives, [8] executive officers. Subordinate executives, if the CEO is also the president, is the vice president, is the vice president (VP). An organization may have more than one vice president, each tasked with a different area of responsibility (e.g., VP of finance, VP of human resources). Examples of subordinate executive officer (COO), chief financial officer (COO), chief financial officer (COO), chief finance, VP of human resources). Examples of subordinate executive officers who typically report to the CEO include the chief operating officer (COO), chief financial officer (COO), chief financial officer (COO), chief finance, VP of human resources). public relations-focused position of chief reputation officer is sometimes included as one such subordinate executive officer, but, as suggested by Anthony Johndrow, CEO of Reputation Economy Advisors, it can also be seen as "simply another way to add emphasis to the role of a modern-day CEO where they are both the external face of, and the driving force behind, an organization culture".[9]Brad D. Smith, former CEO of IntuitIn the US, the term "chief executive officer" is used primarily in the not-for-profit sector.[10] These terms are generally mutually exclusive and refer to distinct legal duties and responsibilities.[11] The CEO is the highest-ranking executive in a company, making corporate decisions, managing operations, allocating resources, and serving as the main point of communication between the board of directors and the company.[12]In the UK, chief executive and chief executive officer are used in local government, where their position in law is described as the "head of paid service", [13] and in business and in the charitable sector. [14] As of 2013[update], the use of the term director for senior charity staff is deprecated to avoid confusion with the legal duties and responsibilities associated with being a charity director or trustee, which are normally non-executive (unpaid) roles. The term managing director is often used in lieu of chief executive officer. Business publicists since the days of Edward Bernays (18911995) and his client John D. Rockefeller (18391937) and even more successfully the corporate publicists for Henry Ford, promoted the concept of the "celebrity CEO". Business journalists have often adopted this approach, which assumes that the corporate achievements, especially in the arena of manufacturing, are produced by uniquely talented individuals, especially the "heroic CEO". In effect, journalists celebrate a CEO who takes distinctive strategic actions. The model is the celebrity in entertainment, sports, and politics compare the "great man theory". Guthey et al argues that "...these individuals are not self-made, but rather are created by a process of widespread media exposure to the point that their actions, personalities, and even private lives function symbolically to represent significant dynamics and tensions prevalent in the contemporary business atmosphere".[15] Journalism thereby exaggerates the importance of the CEO and tends to neglect harder-to-describe broader corporate factors. There is little attention to the intricately organized technical bureaucracy that actually does the work. Hubris sets in when the CEO internalizes the celebrity and becomes excessively self-confident in making complex decisions. There may be an emphasis on the sort of decisions that attract the celebrity journalists.[16]Research published in 2009 by Ulrike Malmendier and Geoffrey Tate indicates that "firms with award-winning CEOs subsequently underperform, in terms both of stock and of operating performance".[17]Main article: Executive compensation ControversyExecutive compensation has been a source of criticism following a dramatic rise in pay relative to the average worker's wage. For example, the relative pay was 20-to-1 in 1965 in the US, but had risen to 376-to-1 by 2000.[18] The relative pay differs around the world, and, in some smaller countries, is still around 20-to-1.[19] Observers differ as to whether the rise is due to competition for talent or due to lack of control by compensation committees.[20] In recent years, investors have demanded more say over executives has also been a source of criticism.[22] In 2018, 5% of Fortune 500 CEOs were women.[23] In 2023 the number rose to 10.4% of for Women CEO's of Fortune 500 companies.[24] The reasons for this are explained or justified in various ways, and may include biological sex differences in Big Five personality traits and temperament, sex differences in psychology and interests, maternity and career breaks, hypergamy, phallogocentrism. the existence of old boy networks, tradition, and the lack of female role models in that regard. [25][26][27] Some countries have passed laws mandating boardroom gender guotas. [28] In 2023 Rockefeller Foundation awarded a grant to Korn Ferry to research strategies and then action a plan to help more women to become CEO's. [29]See also: Toxico female role models in that regard. [25][26][27] Some countries have passed laws mandating boardroom gender guotas. leaderThere are contentious claims that a significant number of CEO's have psychopathic tendencies, often characterized by power-seeking behavior behind a facade of charm and eloquence. Traits such as courage and risk-taking, generally considered desirable, are often found alongside these psychopathic traits thrive in chaotic environments and are aware that others do not. As a result, they may intentionally create chaos in the workplace.[30][31] This perspective is explored in the book Snakes in Suits, co-authored by Robert D. Hare. However, Scott Lilienfeld has argued that the attention given to psychopathy in the workplace by both the media and scholars has far exceeded the available scientific evidence. Emilia Bunea, writing in Psychology Today, has linked psychopathic traits in managers to workplace bullying, employee dissatisfaction, and turnover intentions. Despite this, Bunea cautions that excessive worry about supposed psychopathic managers could discourage individuals from pursuing careers in corporations and deter employees from addressing issues with difficult bosses.[32]CEO successionCEO of public schoolsCity managerExecutive officerFounder modeGlass cliffList of books written by CEOsList of chief executive officersOccupational Information NetworkPrime ministerUnited States Department of Labor[^] a b Lin, Tom C. Its "hometown" (as designated by the league) is shared with neighbours Urawa Red Diamonds. The team currently play in J2 League, the Japanese second tier of professional football, after promotion from the third tier in 2024. The club was known as miya Arudja (, miya Arudja), before club administration was taken over by Red Bull GmbH in late November 2024 who renamed the club. Former logo, used until 2024Logotype of the club RB Omiya Ardijamiya Ardija's original crest features a squirrel on the right, which is the animal of Omiya, including the famous Nakasend, which runs to the Hikawa Shrine, right near Nack5 Stadium.[2][3]On 6 November 2024, miya Ardija officially change crest and name to RB miya Ardija after being acquired by Red Bull GmbH from 2025.[1] The club retained their formers club but adopted a new logo which is identical to the others Red Bull owned club. The former nickname of Omiya is Tisu, a squirrel in Japan. The team were founded in 1968 as NTT Saitama Soccer Selection in Urawa, Saitama and later known as the NTT Kant Soccer Club in 1969. They were first promoted to the Japan Soccer League (JSL) Division 2 in 1987/88, and when the JSL folded, joined the former Japan Football League.[4]In 1998 the club was separately incorporated as NTT Sport Community K.K. based in miya to participate in the J. League. The name "Ardija" is a transcription of the Spanish language ardilla (squirrel) which is the mascot of miya and the park in which their home stadium is located.[4][5]Their matches against Urawa Red Diamonds have been called the "Saitama derby".[6]From 2005 to 2007, most of miya's home matches were held at Saitama Stadium 2002 and Urawa Komaba Stadium due to expansion works at their home ground. In October 2007 the expansion was complete. On November 11, the re-opening match was held as a J. League season match between the miya and ita Trinita (12).[7] miya was relegated again following the 2017 season. They competed in J1 2005 and continued to remain until 2014, following promotion from J2 in 2004 as the second placed team. In 2023, miya were relegated to J3 League after six seasons stint in second division due to worst performance and will play third division football for the first time since 1993. On 15 February 2024, before the start of the season, Sports Nippon reported that Austrian energy drink maker Red Bull may buy a J.League club, and that miya Ardija.[9]In August 2024, before the start of the season, Sports Nippon reported that Red Bull may buy a J.League club, and that miya Ardija.[9]In August 2024, before the start of the season, Sports Nippon reported that Red Bull may buy a J.League club, and that miya Ardija.[9]In August 2024, before the start of the season, Sports Nippon reported that Red Bull may buy a J.League club, and that miya Ardija.[9]In August 2024, before the start of the season, Sports Nippon reported that Red Bull may buy a J.League club, and that miya Ardija.[9]In August 2024, before the start of the season, Sports Nippon reported that Red Bull may buy a J.League club, and that miya Ardija.[9]In August 2024, before the start of the season, Sports Nippon reported that Red Bull may buy a J.League club, and that miya Ardija.[9]In August 2024, before the start of the season, Sports Nippon reported that Red Bull may buy a J.League club, and the season of t Omiya Ardija announced Red Bull as their new owner, after acquiring 100% of the club shares, formerly owned by NTT, becoming part of their multi-club ownership.[10] This will be the first time that a foreign company has become the sole owner of a major Japanese professional sports team, including the J.League.[11] Red Bull began by acquiring management rights to Austrian first division club Salzburg in 2005 and now owns six clubs: Leipzig in Bundesliga, New York Red Bulls in the United States MLS, Liefering in Admiral 2. Liga, Bragantino in Campeonato Brasileiro Serie A and Red Bull Brasil (now Red Bull Brasil (now Red Bull Brasil) in the Sao Paulo State Championship. In the past, they also owned Red Bull Ghana in Africa and Omiya will be the eighth club they own.NTT East will continue to support the company as a sponsor even after defeating Fukushima United 32, thus returning to the second tier after a one year absence. Six days later, Omiya secured the J3 League title with a 11 draw against Imabari in matchweek 33.
