The results could be sending a complex signal to Wall Street, as the two frontrunners represent two vastly different potential futures for artificial intelligence in finance. DeepSeek is reportedly backed by a Chinese quantitative hedge fund, suggesting its success may stem from specialized financial data and expert fine-tuning—an evolutionary step for today's data-driven firms.

Galaxy Digital reported strong third-quarter earnings, driven primarily by higher trading activity and continued expansion in asset management, signaling steady institutional interest in crypto-focused financial services.

Since the Trump administration's permissive about-face on crypto policy this year, all manner of crypto institutions have applied for bank charters. Among them: crypto exchange Coinbase, payments processor Stripe, stablecoin issuer Paxos, USDC issuer Circle, and even Sony Bank, the financial arm of the media giant.

"We must collectively govern the integration of transformative tools like AI, which, powered by the immutable transparency of the blockchain, can finally move AML past the problem of low-value, static data," Fabiano said, calling the evolution "an opportunity, not a constraint" essential to securing a credible, compliant financial ecosystem.

When you've been around markets long enough, you start to see patterns. The tools we trade on and the rails we build on are never static. In crypto, one of the biggest shifts happening right now is at the base layer.

While some market observers believe that the traditional crypto four-year cycle is about to be broken, analysts told Decrypt this week that they believe some traders are still following the classic rulebook—and selling due to the expectation of falling prices ahead.
