Decentralized applications (DApps) are changing the way we interact with the Internet. Unlike traditional applications, DApps run on blockchain networks, do not rely on centralized servers, and feature decentralization, openness, and immutability. Currently, DApps are mainly concentrated in games, finance, social media, and other fields, providing users with brand new experiences. Although the development of DApps still faces challenges such as user experience, performance, and scalability, with the continuous advancement of technology, we believe that DApps will become an important part of the future Internet.

The shift shows that while investors expect the market to remain contained, they are hedging against the risk of a sudden drop.

From Times Square in New York to Portland and Los Angeles, crowds chanted “Resist Fascism” and “We the People Rule,” according to a report from Politico.

Markets run 24/7, and a growing share of volume comes from high-leverage perpetual futures. That means even small order imbalances can trigger sharp, short-lived moves.

Huobi founder Li Lin wants some of that alpha and has reportedly raised about $1 billion as part of a strategy to invest in an Ether treasury.

“We can build, or architect, or code cyberspace to protect values that we believe are fundamental. Or we can build, or architect, or code cyberspace to allow those values to disappear. There is no middle ground. There is no choice that does not include some kind of building. Code is never found; it is only ever made, and only ever made by us.”
