The announcement drew mixed reactions from the Ethereum community, with some sending messages of support and others seeing it as a loss of one of the Ethereum ecosystem's most significant contributors during a year of significant change for the ecosystem.

"There's no way to connect your existing bank accounts to your preferred digital asset exchanges without the open banking rules of the road," Lummis wrote in her letter. "Many big bank CEOs like Jamie Dimon have made their opposition to digital assets very clear."

However, in response, “Wall Street created products that made the dollar dominant, and the market cap of equities today is 40 trillion compared to 2 trillion for gold,” he said.

But not this time. Analysts at the British multinational bank Standard Chartered, who have long been bullish on Bitcoin, don’t think it stops here either. Geoff Kendrick, the bank’s global head of digital assets, said in an investor note published Friday that he expects the price of Bitcoin to reach at least $135,000 in the near term and top $200,000 before the end of the year.
