CleanSpark's strategic pivot comes as the post-Bitcoin-halving pressure is driving mining companies to explore new sources of revenue.

“What that means is that when you remove a result from search under our policies, in addition, what we'll do is on any query that includes your name—or would be likely to surface that page from search—all explicit results will be filtered,” the spokesperson said. “So not all explicit results will be removed, but all explicit results will be filtered on those searches, which prevents them from appearing on searches where it would be likely to show up.”

The uptick, however, occurs amid flat cumulative volume deltas, with a noticeable increase in passive bids at a 10% order book depth, according to CoinGlass data.

"We have hashing technologies, where we have the ability technologically to detect CSAM proactively," the spokesperson said. "That's something that's sort of an industry-wide standard, and we're able to block it from appearing in search."

After resigning from Digital River in February 2020, Armbrust continued accessing the company's Amazon Web Services account between December 2020 and May 2021, running a program that mined cryptocurrency without authorization.

While we abstract it away in our discussions, this final step, the violence, is the basic quantum of all regulation. And as long as governments have armies, and developers and hackers do not, those who believe code is law will be unable to enforce their priors on the rest of us.
