Ethereum's bearish positioning is evident in Deribit's data, which shows "a large increase in open interest of puts since the end of August," Andrew Melville, head of research at crypto derivatives analytics platform Block Scholes, told Decrypt.

But there's other big market players to consider, like Bitcoin treasury companies, according to Rick Maeda, a research analyst at Presto Research. He's especially interested in ones like Japan's Metaplanet, which has sworn off ever selling its BTC stash.

Challenger Troy Johnson took a more nuanced stance, acknowledging concerns while remaining open to future consideration.

The meme coin group has been gloating online about the attention their marketing gimmicks have been receiving, encouraging each other to share and repost any mention of their stunts in the hopes of getting more people to buy their token.

Although $1 trillion is a large number, the Standard Chartered analysts pointed out that it represents "just 2% of aggregate deposits in our 'high-vulnerability' countries."

Lately, however, that decision has moved from tactical to strategic. Beyond developers deciding between ecosystems, big companies are now building their blockchains from scratch. And when the companies doing it are Stripe, Coinbase or other giants with deep regulatory and distribution advantages, the L1 stops being a neutral playing field and starts looking like a moat.
